Investment Opportunities in Wood and Wood Based Products.

Introduction

MDF is an engineered wood product created by breaking down hardwood or softwood residuals into wood fibres, usually in a defibrator, mixing it with wax and a resin binder, and shaping it into panels by applying high temperature and pressure. MDF is denser than plywood in general. It is made up of isolated fibres and can be used as a building material in the same way as plywood is used.

It's more dense and stronger than particle board. The name comes from the difference in fiberboard density. MDF is one of the most adaptable building materials available, as it is homogeneous, relatively inexpensive, and durable, and may be used as a low-cost alternative to timber in a variety of woodworking and carpentry applications.

The following are the different types of MDF (which are sometimes classified by colour):

- 1. MDF plate that is extremely light (ULDF)
- 2. Moisture-resistant plywood is usually green in colour.
- 3. MDF that is fire resistant is usually red or blue in colour.

Uses of Medium Density Fiberboard

Because of its versatility, MDF is frequently utilized in educational projects. In the shop fitting sector, MDF slat wall panels are employed. Because of its weak moisture resistance, MDF is typically used for indoor applications. It's available in three different finishes: raw, carefully sanded, and with a decorative overlay. Because of its robust surface, MDF is also suitable for furniture such as cupboards.

Because of its poor moisture resistance, MFD Board is a cost-effective and internal-use product.

Advantages of MDF:

- 1.It is generally less expensive than plywood or wood.
- 2. Has no voids or splinters and is constant throughout.
- 3.MDF has a flat surface that makes painting a breeze.

- 4. Does not splinter, burn, or tear out when cut with a router, scroll saw, band saw, or jigsaw.
- 5. It's easier to draw on MDF than it is on wood.
- 6. Because various chemicals are employed in the manufacturing of MDF, it is insect resistant.
- 7. MDF is environmentally friendly because it is made from recycled wood.

Market Outlook

The global market for medium density fiberboard was worth USD 61.3 billion in 2019 and is predicted to increase at a CAGR of 6.6 percent from 2020 to 2027. The growing use of the product in furniture and building applications is projected to drive demand. The MDF market is being driven by an increase in demand for MDF for furniture, as well as the widespread usage of these boards in building materials.

Because of expanding product application in furniture and building applications, as well as technical breakthroughs and improvements in production, the global medium density fiberboard (MDF) market is predicted to rise rapidly. One of the key factors contributing to the global MDF market's growth is the increasing building and construction industry, particularly in emerging countries. In 2019, Asia Pacific dominated the MDF market, accounting for 61.0 percent of total market share.

In the construction industry, increased construction investment in emerging nations to fulfil rising residential housing demand is predicted to be a major factor boosting demand for MDF panels. The rising usage of recycled wood fibres in MDF production has also helped to propel the medium density fiberboard industry forward. Growing manufacture of environmentally friendly MDF products will provide new market prospects.
