

Lucrative Production Business of

Magnesium Stearate

Business Opportunities in Chemical Industry.

Introduction

Magnesium stearate, often known as $\text{Mg}(\text{C}_{18}\text{H}_{35}\text{O}_2)_2$, is a chemical substance having the formula $\text{Mg}(\text{C}_{18}\text{H}_{35}\text{O}_2)_2$. It's a soap made up of two stearate (stearic acid's anion) and one magnesium cation (Mg^{2+}) equivalents in a salt. Magnesium stearate is a powder that is white and insoluble in water. Its softness, insolubility in a wide range of solvents, and low toxicity are all used in its applications.

It's utilized in the manufacturing of medications and cosmetics as a releasing agent and as a component or lubricant. Magnesium stearate is made up of stearic acid and magnesium, an important element. It's a blend of pure stearic acid and palmitic acid with a stearic acid content of at least 40.0 percent and a total acid content of at least 90.0 percent. The FDA considers magnesium stearate to be generally safe.

Magnesium stearate is available as a salt and is used in industry for its lubricating characteristics in capsules and tablets. It's used to keep pharmaceutical substances from sticking to equipment in the manufacturing process. Magnesium stearate can come from both animal and plant sources.

1. Medications: Magnesium stearate is referred to as a "flow agent" by pharmaceutical companies. Its primary function is to prevent the contents of a capsule from adhering together. It also acts as a barrier between the drugs and the equipment that produce them. The powder increases the pharmaceutical capsules' uniformity and quality.

2. Cosmetics: Magnesium stearate is a useful ingredient in the cosmetics industry for a variety of reasons. It serves as a bulking agent, anti-caking agent, colourant, and other functions.

Uses of Magnesium Stearate

The magnesium salt of the fatty acid stearic acid is magnesium stearate. It's been utilised as an emulsifier, binder, and thickener in the food business for decades, as well as an anticaking, lubricant, release, and antifoaming agent. Food supplements, confectionary, chewing gum, herbs & spices, and baking components all include it. In the manufacture of pharmaceutical tablets, capsules, and powders, magnesium stearate is frequently employed as an inactive component.

In the production of medicinal tablets, capsules, and powders, magnesium stearate is frequently employed as an anti-adherent. The material is especially beneficial in this regard since it possesses lubricating characteristics, which prevent ingredients from sticking to production equipment during the compression of chemical powders into solid tablets; magnesium stearate is the most often used tablet lubricant.

However, it may result in decreased wettability and slower disintegration of the tablets, as well as slower and even lower drug solubility. Magnesium stearate can be utilized in dry coating techniques as well.

Market Outlook

The global magnesium stearate market was worth $1,492.3 million in 2019, and it is predicted to grow at a rate of 5.3 percent between 2020 and 2030. One of the primary factors encouraging the expansion of the worldwide magnesium stearate market is the rapid growth of the pharmaceuticals sector in Asia-Pacific (APAC), as well as the increasing consumption of the compound in the personal care sector.

Pharmaceutical, personal care, and food and beverage sectors are among the industries that use the product. It's widely utilised in the pharmaceutical business as a lubricant, binder, and filler in tablet processing, excipients, and ointment manufacture. The market is likely to see increasing investment in R&D efforts from key market participants. The market is expected to rise due to the increasing use of magnesium stearate as an excipient in tablets, capsules, and other medication formulations.

The market is growing due to rising health consciousness among people all over the world, as well as rising disposable incomes in nations like China and India. However, rising raw material prices, such as stearic acid, have hampered demand for the product. The market's upward ascent is being hampered by rising raw material prices.
